It really says something about a speaker when he is selected by the trade show industry to address the top tradeshows in the world. In this powerful event, Nicholas shares with his audience how the connected economy, social analytics and a wide range of other factors will completely change meetings and events in the future.

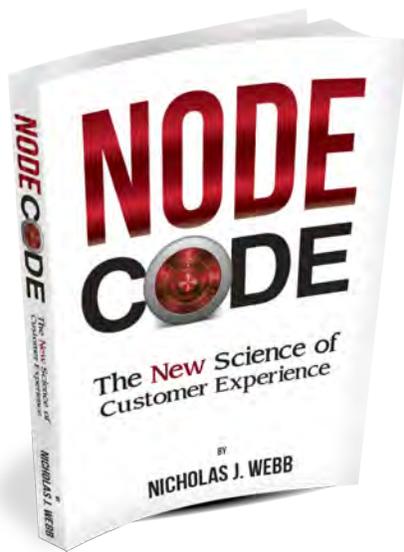

Healthcare industry leaders learned about the future of healthcare and what they can expect over the next five years.

Nicholas has been involved in healthcare for nearly a quarter of a century. During that period of time, he has researched the massive changes that are happening in his powerful keynote presentation. He takes the audience into an exciting and captivating journey into the future of healthcare.

Nicholas speaks in San Francisco on the future of engineering consumer experiences.

One of the most powerful trends today is engineering human experiences across a range of customer touch points. This powerful trend mandates that organizations completely retool their old-fashioned approach towards customer experience. Nicholas delivers a powerful talk with step-by-step deliverables that the audience can take away and apply in their enterprises immediately.

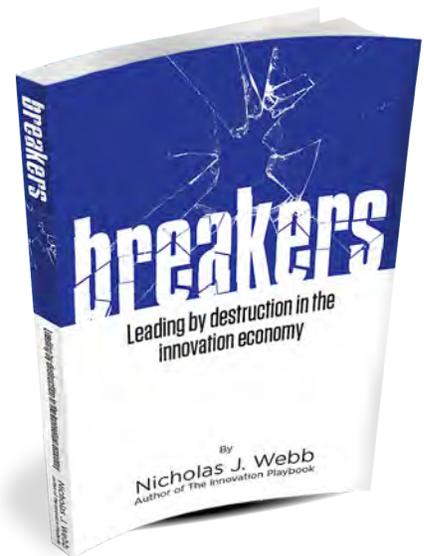

Coming to the bookstores in fall of 2015, one of the most powerful books on the subject of customer service and human experience engineering.

After two years of grueling research, Nicholas has identified all of the technology stacks, business best practices, and consumer trends that will drive the future of customer service. In this powerful book, Nicholas identifies consumers as both digital and non-digital node types. Understanding this new body of research on the new science of customer service is literally the difference between business success and failure.
